THE EVENING STAR.

WASHINGTON: April 24, 1891 FRIDAY ... CROSBY S. NOYES Editor

THE EVENING STAR has the fullest Local Circulation of any Nowspaper in the World and as an Advertising Medium is worth more than all the other papers published in Washington.

No political party in this country can afford lo enter upon an indiscriminate crusade against foreign immigration, and public opinion would not sustain such a crusade if it were begun The law-abiding naturalized American is and will be an inseparable and valuable element of the brain and muscle of the great republic But indiscriminate exclusion was not proposed by the original resolution at the Cincinnati con vention of republican clubs. The clause which was stricken out proposed to prohibit the entrance of those so alien in ideas and habits that they could not be assimilated in the body politic. Paupers and criminals were shut out. But incapacity to be assimilated and to become American is really a more serious objection against an immigrant than a mere lack of money. In the cases of very many Chinese immigrants through the showing that might be made by the companies which handle and regulate them it might be impossible to shut them out either as paupers or criminals. This republic has reached a period of growth and development when it not only can, but must ex- ARE YOU WITH Uar clude from its shores, as far as may be practi cable, all peoples who are incapable of becoming loyal Americans, and who from centurie of experience and training in living upon little and almost nothing will debase national labor by competition with the more costly and wasteful human machines of the new world. It is not sense to protect as the national policy the man nfacturers of the country against the product of degraded cheap labor, in Asia for example and to permit this same cheap labor to come t this country and to compete with the American workman with his more expensive needs and aspirations. It is inconsistent to protect only the products of a country, and to leave its peo ple unprotected, when both material prosperity and the public morals are threatened.

The coin of the republic-is it republican, is It artistic? Now just look at it. In ancient times the Phrygian cap was emblematic of re lease from slavery. The figure was that of a freedman, not of a freeman. The difference is as wide as the universe and as profound as human history and the philosophy of civil gov ernment. The founders of the republic never were slaves were always, in the broades sense, asserters of individual and national lib erty. Away then with a symbol that speaks of the freedom that a Roman senate conferred on its captives! Again, the eagle on the dollar piece is not inaptly contemned as a vulture of low degree. It is a kind of compromise between the feathery scavenger of a far southern city and a well-known long-legged water fowl, and, if possible, is more ungainly than either of its prototypes-an aggravation of type by amalgamation, a mongrel aggregation of horrific features. As the director of the mint says, in substance, "the buzzard dollar" and the other incongruities and abnormalities must give place to something better. The decimal system cannot be improvedit is the sum of excellence. The symbolism wanting in appropriateness of design, and the execution of such design as there is is faulty to the last degree in some of the coins. It is hoped by every American having the slightest pretensions to taste that the plans to be sub-mitted on the 1st of June in accordance with the director's circular may be a vast improvement on the existing dies.

Whether or not the United States have been to blame for not seeking closer commercial reone with the oldest of American commun ties, the opportunity now presented by the visit of the commissioner from San Domingo for a reciprocal trade with that republic is too good to be neglected. The ball of reciprocity, with Brazil, is now rolling on and must soon cover the hemisphere in its beneficent opera-Domingo's imports this republic supplies only three-quarters of a million. In many of the leading lines of industry the neighbor republic a crowded out by England, France and Germany. Reciprocity would give us command of nearly all of these items, to the profit of the Spanish-speaking people of San Domingo as well as to the advantage of the English-speak-ing people of the United States. The fact that sixty per cent of the West Indian republic's sugar crop is owned by citizens of this country is urged with force by the other as a reason why a reciprocal arrangement admitting the products of sugar plantations thus con-trolled should be effected speedily.

There seems to be a recrudescence of Maria Theres, "King" of Hungary, in the Hungarian low life of the Pennsylvania coke region. The women not only take up the weapons of warfare, they use them with a tigeriah ferocity that puts to blush the achievements of Frederick the Great's great enemy. The republic owes this sort of thing, too, to its mis-taken generosity and the shameful system of contract pauper labor from Europe.

Mr. Cleveland says that Mr. Stephens of Missouri put those silver words in his mouth and Mr. Stephens says the reporter did it. Of "LIGHTS AND SHADES" course, the reporter is to blame. He always is. What the newspapers need is a reporter who can prepare an oscillating interconvertible interview warranted to fit all opinions and to coincide with the fluctuations of public feeling and of the person interviewed.

John L. Sullivan, the sluggeresque Thespian appeared on the stage of a Cincinnati theate. Monday evening while drunk, and a gallery god used him as a target for an orange in a state of decay. Thereupon Mr. Sullivan offered to whip the entire house and the entire house in a cruel and cowardly manner guyed the artist clear off the stage. Ill fares the town, to hastening fils a prey, where pure dramatic art is knocked out in this way.

"prominent democratic politician" says so. If Maryland scientists have not found out that the along shore oyster supper affords the best mode of studying scientifically the bivalve question they are not experts. And they should

A lady who yesterday received a draft for the amount of a personal claim against the gov-ernment was so overcome that she fainted. She, no doubt, expected that her great grandchil dren might get the money and the sudden shock was too much for her.
